NEW DAY FOR BRIDGE MCFARLAND

Lincoln lawyers Bridge McFarland have strengthened their family law team with the appointment of associate solicitor Jo Day.

Jo, 32, is experienced in many aspects of family law including divorce and separation, cases involving children, settling finances and dealing with domestic violence.

She decided to become a solicitor after a short career in the merchant navy with BP Shipping's deep sea oil tanker fleet. She obtained a degree in law and criminology from the University of Lincolnshire and Humberside in 1998 and completed her legal practice course at York on a part-time basis.

She qualified as a solicitor in November 2002 and worked for two firms in Lincoln before joining Bridge McFarland.

She has been married for ten years after meeting her husband, who works in the oil industry, while at Marine College.
